

The Eikenberry's home at 2405 Sycamore Lane was the first house built on Sycamore Lane back in 1965, when it was a gravel road. Through the years, the family has added on to the house, with a major renovation and garage construction occurring ten years ago. At that point, Joyce created a separate garden room for her enjoyment, featuring garden art and many of her large collection of lilacs. Along the front of the home is a planting of red Knock-out roses which catch the attention of many passers-by all summer long. A beautiful pink dogwood sits at the front door, planted to honor the birth of granddaughter, Maya. Five other trees honoring grandchildren are sited throughout the landscaping, which includes a wide variety of perennials, shrubs, and conifers. This award winner is an excellent example of a mature landscape which has responded to change well and looks great every year.
